The first person responsible for the situation, according to the court, was the defendant, who had been charged with the duty of ensuring that the company's financial records were accurate and complete. The court found that the defendant had failed to do so, and that this failure had resulted in the company's financial records being inaccurate and incomplete. The court also found that the defendant had been negligent in his duties, and that this negligence had resulted in the company's financial records being inaccurate and incomplete. The court therefore ordered that the defendant be held liable for the company's financial losses, and that he be ordered to pay compensation to the company for the losses suffered as a result of his negligence.
